Archery, 50-yard, 65-yard, 100-yard, 200/300 yard

Users of the various ranges must comply with the following rules:

- Observe CDC Routine Prevention Procedures.
- Maintain social distancing between shooters, and between shooters, instructors, and coaches, of at least 6 feet.
- Soap and water or hand sanitizers will be available in the target shed and in the portable toilets. Nitrile gloves will also be available in the target shed.
- During range operations, CRGC members function as Range Safety Officers, and will now have the additional function of observing compliance with CDC procedures. Individual CRGC members who fail to comply should be reported to the board of directors. CRGC members, guests, or members of the public who are part of a group should be reported to the group leader (class instructor, match director, event manager, or the CRGC member whose guest they are).
- Group activities are under the control of the coach, team leader, class instructor, match director, CRGC member, or event organizer, who is individually responsible for the compliance of the group members with CDC and CRGC rules.
- Any classes or meetings must be conducted with tables or seating arranged in such a way that each participant is sitting at least six feet from any other participant, and each participant can move to or from their seating location without getting closer than six feet to any other participant.
- Coaches or instructors who are providing individual instruction to shooters must wear a face mask and nitrile gloves, and only approach the shooter with the shooter's permission, and then only close enough to make clear or rectify the instructional or safety issue being addressed.
